HR Services Now In Your Department

by Nancy Sutch

Prior to 2003, the State of Alaska had a decentralized Human Resource (HR) structure. Policy and procedures for HR services were developed and administered by the Department of Administration, Division of Personnel and Labor Relations (DOPLR) but the implementation of those HR services and day-to-day operations were delivered by the Personnel Office located in each department and reported up through that departments' chain of command.

In 2003, the decision was made to centralize all HR Operations in order bring consistency in the application of HR policies and practices within the executive branch, increase operational efficiency and reduce administration costs. HR staff was then grouped into program areas (position classification, employee services, etc.). Technical and management services were further divided into five service center groups; Public Protection (Departments of Public Safety, Corrections and Military and Veterans' Affairs), Resource (Departments of Fish and Game, Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation), Health and Social Services, Transportation and Public Facilities and the General Agencies (Departments of Law, Education, Commerce, Community and Economic Development, Revenue, Administration, and Labor).

Department of Administration Commissioner, Becky Hultberg, discussed the existing structure with Commissioners in each department. She heard a consistent message; that there was not a strong connection to the agencies and their strategic business needs, and that HR staff didn't know enough about the agencies they served and their unique issues.

The Commissioner believed that best practices would have a presence in the agency so that unique agency requirements could be identified and solutions developed and provided to meet them. It was then decided that certain HR functions would be decentralized and returned to each agency. The functions that would provide the best connection to the agency were employee services, providing assistance to both supervisors and employees in areas such as performance issues, complaint and grievance handling, evaluation assistance, other areas of employment law, and recruitment services which provide assistance to hiring managers in the recruitment and selection process. For consistency purposes other functions would remain in DOPLR. Those areas are Classification, Payroll, Labor Relations, Training and Development and EEO.

Beginning in November 2011, the Division began a pilot program to return certain HR functions to the Department of Labor. Employee services and recruitment services staff were moved into the Labor

HR Update FY 12 – Issue 05

Building in Juneau.

Following in the next phase at the end of February, these same functions were returned to the Departments of Fish and Game, Public Safety and Natural Resources. The following phases in April transitioned staff to the remaining departments except the Department of Law. Because that position is vacant, DOPLR is providing HR support until the position is filled.

In order to maintain consistency in administering statewide policies and procedures, bargaining contract interpretations as well as recruitment processes, DOPLR has begun monthly videoconference meetings for HR and Recruitment Leads in each agency. Other methods for disseminating information across the agencies are being developed, such as some intranet tools that will be available to the HR leads. Most, but not all agencies have both an HR Lead and a recruitment technician. If you haven't done so already you should stop by and introduce yourself to the HR Lead in your agency. They are there to help you.

Strategic Workforce Planning Training

by Connie Preecs

The Performance Institute recently provided Strategic Workforce Planning training to supervisors and human resource staff. Human Resource staff received two days of training which included topics such as developing a workforce plan, defining competencies and assessing the gap. Training was also provided to supervisors in Juneau, Anchorage and Fairbanks with the goal of supervisors gaining a general understanding of the process and the importance of engaging in workforce planning. Agency human resource staff are available to answer questions and provide guidance on the workforce planning process. This training was made possible through training funds provided through the Supervisory and Confidential Unit collective bargaining agreements.

Non-Perm Extensions

This is a reminder to all agencies to refer to the non-perm report provided by Classification each month identifying non-permanent positions that are due to expire so that extension requests can be submitted in a timely manner. With the end of the fiscal year approaching, Classification is already experiencing a very high volume of non-permanent extension requests. You do not need to wait until the current expiration date to submit an extension request; they may be submitted at any time with OMB approval.
